THE NEBRASKA BILL. THE WHIG PRESS OF THE The whir press of the south has been vehement in its accusations against the President for appointing a few repentent freesoflers to office. He has been charged with treachery to southern rights and interests because he would not violate the spirit of the platform laid down by the party which nominated and elected him. The acts of his past life the sentiments of his inaugural and his first annual message pregnent as these documents are with the loftiest national sentiments have been utterly wortifless, in the estimation of whig editors, when compared with the appointment of a few New York softs to office: the latter established conclusively the feet that the sympathies of the administration were with the enemies of the compromise mes

But lo! a change has passed over these intensely southern while editors. A practical question has come up, in which the rights of the south are invoived. Congress is called upon to make the first practical application of the principles of the compromise measures. And now, how stands it with the administration and its accusers? Are the prophecies of southern whig editors about to prove true; or are the prophets themselves silent and false? Let the truth vindicate the President and put to shame his accusers. As soon as Senator Douglas's Nebraska bill, enforcing the principles of the compromise, was introduced, the Washington Uniona paper which in all important matters reflects the sentiments of the administration—gave it a decided and powerful support, and called upon the friends of the administration and the compromise to sustain it. The President and his advisers were thus influence of the administration brought into the field to secure its passage. Under these circumstances it has become almost a fixed fact that the measure will pass both houses of Congress. But while the administration has thus exerted itself to make the passage of the bill certain, the men who but yesterday accused Gen. Pierce of a design to betray the south, have remained silent or joined the enemies of the measure. These self-constituted guardians of the compromise, who stood upon the watch tower and were continually sounding the alarm, have now, when it has become necessary to meet the enemies of that adjustment by practically enforcing its principles, deserted their posts, and left the administration and its friends to meet and decide the issue! Not a single whig newspaper of has yet come out unequivocally in favor of the Nebraska bill? Those that have not openly condemned it, have either remained entirely silent, or sought to "damn it with faint praise."

We copy below extracts from two influential southern whig presses, from which the tendency of the whig press of the south may be judged of. The first is from the Baltimore American, and is emphatic in its condemnation of the Nebraska bill. The second is from the Raleigh (N. C.) Register, and though less decided, it, too, breathes a spirit of opposition to the bill. The Billimore American says;

A calm ensued, (after 1850.) but the ambitious politicians willed that the calm should be of brief duration. They have now re-opened the slavery question, and set the ball of agitation in motion on the Nebraska territorial bill. Why was it necessary to so frame that bill as to cause a clause to be put in it to repeal, or to declare superseded and made null and void, the Missouri Compromise of 1820, which compromise forbade the introduction of slavery into any teritory, acquired with the purchase of Louisiana, north of 36 deg. 30 minutes of north latitude? Nebraska lies north of that line. It is said that the compromise of 1820, making this restraction, is unconstitutional. If it is not unconstiintional, it is at least repealable. If it is not unconstitutional, it caunof prevent the people of Ne-bra-ka from holding property in slaves, if they choose to take slavery there with them. If it is repealable, and the people of Nebraska shall decide to ask for a limission into the Union, as a slave State, it will be time enough for Congress to agitate and act on the subject, when the necessity for such agitation and action arises. Why could not, and why should not the Nebraska bill be framed as were the territorial bills for New Mexico and Utah? Those bills contained no clause relative to the Missouri Compromise, or to the question whether slavery inight or might not go there. That vexed question was wisely deferred to the future decision if the people of those territories. Why could not the same vexed question be deferred to the future decision of the people of Nebraska? Because the ambitious political aspirants of the Democratic party would not suffer it to be so deferred. They want more agitation; they court it, and they mean to have it, that they may

"Ride the whirlward and direct the storm," The Raleigh Register says:

"With these views of the matter, we confess that Missouri Compromise, which was acquiesced in by the South as the condition of the admission of Missouri into the Union-though we hardly know what modification our views may yet undergo.-The North may say, that, by attempting to repeal | tion of any party or sectarian bias into discussion the slavery restrictive clause, the South has violated a solemo compact, and it will be difficult to repel the charge. They will claim, as a matter of course to be released from that and the more recent compromise, and will attempt to introduce the Wilmot Proviso into the territorial Governments now existing, or which may be in future organised. South

"This bill, at all events, will be the rallying cry for another anti-slavery aguation which will throw all that have preceded it in the shade."

When shall we be able to quote the opinions of the Nashville Bunner and Truc Whig?

on to also diddle odd oo'i I albume HOUSE-AFTERNOON SESSION.

FEIDAY, Feb. 10. The subject before the House being Mr. Bailey's resolution, and a motion pending to indefinitely postpone Mr. Sykes being entitled to the floor, resume his argument against the views embodied in the preamble and resolution now before the House .-The point on which he (Mr. S.) mainly relied, was this: that if Mr. Bailey's construction of the law was correct, it would result in manifest injustice to the East Tennessee and Georgia Railroad, for it would grant eight thousand dollars per mile to the Mem phis and Charleston road, and to other roads, and deny the same to the East Tennessee and Georgia road. If the gentleman's interpretation of the 10th section was correct, it would nullify the 15th section; if it did not do this, the gentleman's interpretation was incorrect. Mr. Sykes proceeded to en force and elucidate the position he had assumed,-It matters not that this road had received aid from the State years ago-that had nothing to do with this question. The plain intention of the Legislature in 1852 was to put this road on an equal footing with the other roads embraced in the act, and that intention w li not be carried out under Mr. Bailey's interpretation of the law. The 15th section was inserted expressly with the view of giving the we somewhat doubt the utility of disturbing the State aid to that portion of the road south of Tennessee river. He thought this ought to be conclusive of the case, and he believed this was the true construction, and he believed the Governor had not erred. Mr. S. closed by deprecating the introducof this question, but let it be decided on broad and und principles. Mr. Bailey arose in reply to Mr. Sykes. The gentleman had objected to the phraseology of some parts of the resolution. He had no objection to striking out all that was objected to, and let the resolution merely provide for a suit to be instituted in order to bring the matter to a judicial test. Mr. B. then combatted the objection that the passage of the resolution would tend to break down the system of Internal Improvement. On the contrary, he thought it would have the opposite effect. r it would show a fixed determination to protect and uphold the law, and secure its correct application. Mr. B. alluded also to the remarks made by some other gentlemen who addressed the House this morning. He was glad those gentlemen seemed to be satisfied; and yet more-without boastingthat they were, as he believed, unanswerable. He denied that it was the intention of the last Legislature to put all the roads in the State on an equal footing, for many roads were not embraced in the act at all. No argument could be drawn from this, and it was not the proper way to approach the question. The language of the act must be interpreted in its proper connections, and not otherwise and Mr. B. proceeded to discuss the force and bear ing of the 10th and 11th sections of the act reaffirming his positions as laid down this morning, and combatting the interpretation of Mr. Sykes.— Where then, he would ask, was the error he had committed in his interpretation? He called on the gentlemen to divest themselves of all feeling, and onstrue the statute according to its language. Mr. Brown, of Monroe, followed: after having heard the arguments on both sides, he wished to make a few remarks. He thought the policy of resolutions such as that now under discussion, and their tendercy injurious to the credit of the State, it looked somewhat like repudiation, which was always sought to be colored by a pretext that the sented memorials in favor of the reduction of daty on all imported iron to $12,00, and charcoal iron the whole policy was bad, and that no good could the whole policy was bad, and that no good could come of it. He also thought the measure unnecessary at any rate; the State could not lose any thing by the issuance of these bonds; for the State owned one half of the stock, and the company aiways had paid, and would continue to pay pomptthe interest on the bonds, and the measure in be mischievous. Mr. Brown then discussed the provisions of the act already referred to and gave McClosky's Case.—Pirrespond, Feb. 8—In the case of McClosky's administrator versus the Pennsylvania railroad, a verdict was rendered for the plaintiff for $4,500. McClosky, a drover, was killed on the road last March.

A matter of regict to march, that it had been introduced at all: and he proceeded to discuss the vexed question of the 10th and 15th sections, as had been done by the preceding speakers. He contended against the resolution, as being impolitic.

The Senate returned the provise in the Putnam reamble as expressed the opinion of the House int the Governor had erred; and Mr. Lamb moved insert that doubts existed as to the legality of he issuance of the bonds, which was adopted. Mr. Buford moved an amendment expressin doubts as to the compliance on the part of the East. Tennessee and Georgia Railroad with the conditions requisite to entitle them to the $300,000 in bonds, formerly issued.

Mr. Harris attacked the amendment offered by Mr. Buford: he could see no reason why the gentleman should make this direct thrust at the East Tennessee Road. He contended that the condi-tions had been compiled with fully, and so certified to the Governor under oath as the law required.— The amendment was an attack on the President and officers of the company.

Mr. Buford replied that he had offered the amendment because he had been told by one of the Internal Improvement commissioners that when the clerks. Passes application was made for the bonds they were at a the Judiciary. oss to know whether the company was entitled to 100 or 300 bonds. If there was any thing that would not bear investigation let gentlemen wince; he wanted the whole affair thoroughly examined, and let the State and the people know liow things

Mr. Chamberlain moved to lay the amendment on the table, which motion failed; ayes, 28, nocs, 41. And Mr. Buford's amendment was then adopted; ves 44: noes 26. Mr. Bailey offered an amendment, that if the said bonds have been sold, the faith and credit of the State is hereby pledged for their payment.

Mr. Lillard moved to amend the amends triking out the words "if said bonds have bee sold," and Mr. Bailey to lay it on the table, which was agreed to; ayes, 42; noes, 27.

Mr. Cooper moved to amend Mr. Bailey's amend

"to a bona file purchaser without notice."

When Mr. Harris called the previous question, which was refused, and Mr. Cooper's amendment several roads in the suits to be instituted; Mr. Bar-

ment by inserting after the word "sold" the word

Mr. Lamb would like to have some good reason given for Mr. Temple's amendment: it would only e multiplying law suits and expense both to th State and to parties. Mr. Smith, of Davidson, and Mr. Brown, of Monroe, followed in the same sense they had never heard a word of objection agains the issuance of the bonds to the other roads,

Mr. Temple answered that he had not heard such bjections-and he made none himself-but the colution, if passed, would carry forth an implied charge against the officers of the East Tennessee and Virginia Railroad. If an investigation is to be ha l at all, let it be full and complete, and embrace all the bonds issued to any of the roads. He be lieved the whole proceeding wrong and was opthe credit of the State: he could not sanction it, and he called on gentlemen to pause before they con unmated this measure.

Mr. Harris obtained leave to reply to a remark of Mr. Buford, when it appeared that Mr. H. had misunderstood Mr. Buford's remarks. And Mr. Temple's amendment was adopted ves 39 noss 32. Mr. Chamblis merely wished to say that he nov found the subject just where he expected to find it; it had become quite ridiculous, and he moved to lay the whole question on the table, and the motion prevailed; ayes, 40; noes, 31.

Several motions were made to adjourn until 7 clock to-night, and 91 o'clock to-morrow, which were withdrawn or failed, when on motion of Mr. Cooper the House adjourned until 9 o'clock to-

HOUSE-AFTERNOON SESSION.

The House was called to order at 2 o'clock. Mr. Harris entered a motion to reconsider the vote indefinitely postponing Senate bill for the benefit of Overton and Fentress counties; it was understood that the author of the bill, (Mr. Senator Bowles) desired to address the House on the subject. On motion of Mr. Richardson, Mr. Bowles (who had appeared at the bar of the House) was invited within the bar, and leave granted him for an explanation.

Mr. Bowles said: That he knew that it was a standing rule of the General Assembly that members of one House had not the privilege of addressing the other House, and he desired to return his thanks, for the courtesy the House had extended He would not attempt to make a long speech-he would endeavor to speak to the merits of the bill. He was pained to learn that it had been indefinitely postponed. He had introduced this bill into the Senate for the purpose of facilitating the communications between his county and Nashville. He had been cupped up here in Nash-ville for months, and had not been able in all that ime to send letters or documents to his family or constituents, or to receive letters from them. And now be only asked for a small appropriation to build two little bridges over two forks of Obed River and on a mail road so as to allow the passage of the mails, and now he had the bad misfortune to bear that his bill had been indefinitely postponed on its first reading! It was enough to make him leave here instantly. He had been here two months without having heard once from his family. He hoped the House would reconsider this vote. (The Hon. Senator's speech was received with great approbation, and the House agreed to reconsider the vote, and then the bill passed first reading; a result which considerably elated and gratified the Hon. WRITING INSTITUTE. THE first term of this College will commence on MONDAY, Feb. 13, in the large and spacious room in Cooper's block, on Cherry street, five doors above Deaderick

The course of instruction in this institution will embrace and Penanaship.

No pupil will receive a diploma until he is thoroughly malified to discharge the duties of the accountant.

Students will be instructed in all the modern improved forms adopted by the best regulated houses in the country. among others and which dispenses with the use of the Jour nal, greatly lessening the amount of labor and liability to err, and another which renders the use of the Cash bool and Journal superfiacus, and enables the book-keeper to post his personal accounts daily, and his merchandise and ash as often as thay suit his convenience.

This latter form is more particularly designed for the ass They will be taught a simple process by which the mer-chant may at all times ascertain the amount of his loss or a variety of superior Gold Pens, the best and changest argain, together with the quantity of goods on hand, without resorting to the tedious process of taking an inventory. This institution will be permanent, and has been established to meet the already important and growing commercial interests of the city of Nashville and State of Ten

He holds the post of confidential eferk in his employers, In connection with this catablishment is a department for the benefit of those who wish to take lessons in writing only, where an elegant hand writing will be imparted to sil by, where an elegant annu wrong will be imparted to sall who place themselves under the care of the preceptor.

Pupils entering this institution are not limited to any number of lessons, but for a specified price may continue any branch they pursue until they are perfected, retaining the privilege of reviewing their lessons at any subsequent period, free of charge. TRUTH IS MIGHTY AND WILLPREVAIL.

SALAMANDER SAFES. THE name of Salamander was first applied to Wilder's Patent, and introduced by the subscriber in 1840, who in 1844 purchased the right to manufacture. The superiority of Herring's (Wilder's) Salamander Safes over all others induced many to infringe upon the patent right by using the composition; others more cautious, and to evade a lawsuit, made an inferior article, imitating the exterior in form, style, color of painting, and attaching the name "Sal-amander," "Improved Salamander," Fre Proof Salaman-de," "The Genuine Salamander," &c., &c., and have succeeded in palming off some of the spurious Salamanders as genuine. Those wanting the original Salamander, manu-factured by the subscriber, should take the precaution to factured by the super-near a metal plate—'Silas C.
